Why Use our Ghostwriter Services?

Using a professional, experienced ghostwriter can increase your chances of finding a literary agent and of getting published. This can be reassuring when you don't have the time, patience or writing skills to gamble on such an unpredictable project yourself.

Saving Time

The majority of people who need ghostwriters will be busy, hard working celebrities or business people. For these individuals, time means money. Putting their (limited) time at stake as well as their money is never advisable.

With extensive experience of producing quality manuscripts within a reasonable deadline, our writers can save you a lot of time. Whilst we write you a captivating, readable book within several months, you can continue to go about the very life. Hiring a ghostwriter is an investment in both time and money – we'll get it done twice as fast, halving the sacrifices you make.

Promoting your Brand

Hiring a ghostwriter won't make your piece any less personal or representative of your personality, brand or business. Releasing a book can actually be a great form of brand management. Ghostwriters possess the skills and know-how when it comes to formulating and imitating their clients' style in order to capture the personality or ethos of a person or brand.

What's more, these are your ideas and life stories; we are just here to help stimulate the ideas that are in your head but not yet on paper. Once we get them down, we can put them in a logical order that reads well and reflects your interests and desires regarding the outcome of the book. For an untrained writer, this can be a lengthy and frustrating exercise, especially when success isn't guaranteed.

Finding a Literary Agent

Once the book is completed, and especially if it has the potential to pull in big profits, it can be useful to use a literary agent to present the book to potential publishers. We know a number of literary agents and can let you know which ones deal with the category of book we have written for you. Literary agents are a great way to put your work in front of a publisher as they have many valuable contacts in the literary world. Once again, you can increase your chances of finding a literary agent to read and promote your work if that work is well written and engaging.

There are hundreds of books that are overlooked by agents and editors each year and it can be a difficult and convoluted network to stand out in. That is why, if your book is written by a reputable writer, you will have more chance of finding a literary agent in the first place. By using one of our ghostwriters, you will not only be put in contact with the literary agents we know but, as published writers, we can use all our existing knowledge about how to turn the heads of literary agents. Once you have a literary agent on board, you just have to conquer the publisher.

Getting Published

Pitching a book to publishers is probably the hardest and most precarious part of the process. Literary agents will find it much easier to promote books written by experienced professionals like ourselves who have written published books for countless celebrities, public figures and business executives.

Hiring a ghostwriter to produce a manuscript will increase your chances of getting published, which of course means more money for the literary agent as well as for the client. We can also help you find a book publisher that will be attracted to the style and topic of the book, meaning you won't waste time asking the wrong people.
